

El Camino Selected for Cost Survey

El Camino college has been selected to be one of 100 colleges in the United States to participate in a nationwide study of costs students incur while attending college.

Merl F. Sloan, director of student personnel, said 200 undergraduate students of the college have been selected to take part in the survey by filling out a four-page questionnaire prepared by the United States Office of Education.

The purpose of the study was described as being to determine what may be done to assist students going to college. "Parents, college administrators, boards of trustees, donors, agencies, State and Federal governments, as well as students themselves, have frequently expressed concern about the pyramiding costs students incur in attending college," a statement on the questionnaire read.

Results of the study, Sloan said, will be published by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare sometime in the future. They will assist both public and private agencies in planning future school tuition programs.
